THERE'S SO MUCH TO SEE IN WASHINGTON, D.C. AND VICINITY— AND YOU SEE MORE WHEN YOU GO D.C. TRANSIT!

Every American, from childhood on, is imaginatively and emotionally attracted to see his nation's capital. He knows he will feel at home, even before he gets there—for this wondrous, shining city belongs to all Americans.

SOMETHING ABOUT WASHINGTON . . .

Washington as a site for the Nation's Capital grew out of the need of a permanent capital by a roving Continental Congress. Difficulties arose in choosing a site. George Washington, as President, recommended a southern location. Vice-President Adams favored a northern location.

The site on which the city now stands was ceded by Maryland and Virginia in 1791. Later that portion ceded by Virginia, including the town of Alexandria, again became part of the Old Dominion State.

The layout of Washington, with its wide streets and stately shade trees, numerous parks, large circles with radiating streets and avenues, is an outgrowth of the plan envisaged by Major Charles Pierre L'Enfant, a French engineer whom Washington hired to design the Federal City. Although L'Enfant did not live to see his plan materialize in all respects, many of his ideas were adopted in the final plan of the city.

Today, the Nation's Capital and its suburbs have a population of over 1,250,000. It is a good city in which to live and work. Hundreds of thousands of American pilgrims each year visit its shrines and show places. Few cities in the world can boast such a splendid variety of great museums, art galleries, libraries, stately public buildings, theatres, and recreational facilities.

Car and Bus Routes

80 Indicates street car lines. 52 Indicates bus lines. F1 Rush-hour service only. Indicates bus lines. N2 Cut back service. 52 Limited service.

Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc.

Street cars and buses display route numbers and destination names at the front near the top of vehicle. Street cars carry numbers; buses carry letters and numbers. On both this map, and the "blowup" of the downtown section on the reverse side, route numbers are shown for all day service with a solid background, for rush hour service with a white background outlined with a border.

It should be borne in mind in consulting the maps that base, or all day service, runs through the day in rush hours as well as at other times and that rush hour service is operated in addition to base day service. For that reason on many lines there appear route numbers with a solid background and others with a white background with border.

On some streets where buses operate a dash line instead of a solid line is used to indicate rush hour service only. In other words, where a route is shown by a broken line, only rush hour service is provided.

A RED STRIPE through a route number means that a car or bus turns back short of the regular all-day terminal of that line, following the regular route but not proceeding to the furthermost terminus as do others of that line not striped. A RED BACKGROUND behind a bus route number shows that bus is in limited stop service, that is, it does not stop at all points along the route.

An arrow on a line on the map indicates the service on that street at that point is given only in the direction the arrow points.
